

Help all students succeed beyond high school

HIGH SCHOOLS ACROSS THE NATION are beginning to recognize that a student's long-term success will be determined by his or her ability to continue learning.

College and Career Ready, by researcher and educational policy expert David T. Conley, explains the rationale and the methods for redesigning high schools to focus on college and career readiness skills. The book offers:

- evidence for why high schools need to change their focus
- research-validated descriptions of the knowledge and skills today's high school students need
- practical methods that faculty can use to enhance the readiness of their students
- guidelines high schools can use to improve their alignment with postsecondary requirements
- numerous examples of high schools currently doing these things well
- lesson samples designed to develop and assess a student's cognitive development over time

College And Career Ready by David T. Conley, PhD
In bookstores and online March 2010, ISBN 978-0-470-25791-3
www.CollegeCareerReady.org

“David Conley offers a profoundly insightful and clear blueprint for designing high schools that will prepare students for post-secondary success. Anyone interested in supporting and leading schools—principals, superintendents, school leadership coaches—will benefit from College and Career Ready.”

—Sue Fine, executive director,
The Urban Assembly Schools Network

“This book is one stop shopping for all crucial college and career readiness concepts and components. Complete with in-depth descriptions of numerous exemplary schools, College and Career Ready will be indispensable to policymakers, administrators, and teachers who seek to implement comprehensive college readiness initiatives in a variety of state and school contexts.”

—Michael Kirst, professor emeritus,
Stanford University

“David Conley is a powerful and articulate voice on the critical subject of college and career readiness. His new book serves as a substantive and practical guide, with both research and case studies, for those of us who are on the front lines of the effort to transform our schools and ready our students for the future.”

—Jim Nelson, executive director,
AVID Center